Tutu makes plea for South Africa and student involvement

By MORRIE RATNER staff writer

South African Bishop Desmond Tutu, recipient of the 1984 Nobel Peace prize, thanked over 7,000 people attending a quad rally yesterday for their efforts to end

Although Tutu is legally prohibited from speaking directly about economic sanctions against South Africa or mentioning the word divestment, he addressed the issue during a brief press conference prior to his quad appearance.

A race war would be "Armageddon" in South Africa and would aggravate racial tensions throughout the world, Tutu said. 'I pray to God people will help us before it is too late."

Tutu asks for economic sanctions

By JANE ROSENBERG

Sacramento correspondent SACRAMENTO-Bishop Desmond Tutu pleaded yesterday to state legislators now considering three divestment bills to impose economic sanctions against his native South Africa to end apartheid, coming as close as he could to endorsing divestment without committing treason.

Tutu's remarks before a special joint session of the Legislature were the strongest since he came to California last week.

South Africa's Terrorism Act prohibits Tutu from advocating a withdrawal of U.S. funds from corporations doing business in South Africa.

Tutu also branded the Reagan administration's current policy of constructive engagement as "evil" and warned that without any external pressure from the international community, a race war will break out in South Africa.

"Please, for goodness' sake, help us exert pressure-political pressure, diplomatic pressure and, above all, economic pressure," the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize recipient said before speaking at UC Davis and UC Berkeley.

"Help us bring about this tremendous new (South African) society. Help us so we can be human together. Help us to please avoid Armageddon, because if a racial war breaks out in South Africa, you won't be able to sit on the sidelines," he said

Throughout his whirlwind tour of the state, members of Tutu's entourage have fielded questions about divestment.

Before appearing in the Legislature, outgoing California Democratic Council President Lia Belli explained to a breakfast audience that last week's meeting between Tutu, UC President David Gardner and Stanford University President Donald Kennedy was kept private so "those words couldn't be used against Bishop Tutu."

It was also Belli, Tutu's constant companion the past week, who called for the implementation of the so-called Tutu principles—that if there is no significant change in South African policy in 18-24 months, major economic sanctions should be instituted.

The outspoken Tutu, however, still found room to criticize opponents of divestment when speaking to the Legislature. "Don't let people use us as an alibi for not doing the things we ought to do. Don't give us the baloney that if you apply sanctions in South Africa then you hurt those you are trying to help," he said.

"I haven't heard you use that argument in Poland. I haven't heard you use that argument in Nicaragua. Don't give us that kind of sophistry," he said.

Tutu told legislators the United States is "held high" in South Africa, equated the racial segregation of apartheid with Nazism and said the United States has a "moral imperative" to actively pursue change in South Africa.

"When I say we will be free, there is no doubt in my mind we will be free," he said. "We will remember those who helped us to be free. You will have taken the kind of action to avoid Armageddon in our land.'

Tutu recalled the effects of apartheid on all black South Africans as well as himself. The Pretoria government has stated his nationality is "undetermined at present" and the new highly touted reform constitution still ignores the political rights of 73 percent of the population, he said.

"The perpetuation of a policy such as this is one the Reagan administration supports with a policy of constructive engagement," Tutu said. "Four years ago, I described it as an unmitigated disaster for blacks. Now, into the second time 'round of this administration, I have no cause to have to modify my description.

'This policy is itself evil for collaborating with an evil policy," he said. "Apartheid is the most vicious system since Nazism."

Tutu also called the institutionalized segregation of his country the "final solution" proposed by the white minority government. "And I use that term guardedly,"

Several legislators looked to Tutu's speech to whip up support for their divestment and anti-Please see back page

Over 1,000 chanting and sign-waving people filled "Desmond Tutu Plaza" in front of Mrak Hall to hear speakers attack apartheid and urge divestment of University of California funds from companies doing business in South Africa following Bishop Desmond Tutu's appearance yesterday.

Piet Moatse, a pastor of the Dutch reform church in South Africa, applauded student efforts to force the UC Board of Regents to vote for total divestment of funds from businesses with South African ties.

"Much has to be done to set our brothers free. Your solidarity is a voice," Moatse said.

While South African law prevents Moatse from calling for economic sanctions against the government of South Africa, his speech indicated his favor of such actions.

"We know he can't say words like divestment, so listen carefully for the words that make his meaning clear," said event moderator the Rev. Pete Sabey, co-director of the Cal Aggie House.

By J.W. AKERS-SASSAMAN news editor

A handful of conservative protesters called yesterday for the University of California to recognize the Soviet Union's "heinous and atrocious" civilrights violations and to divest from companies doing business there.

The UC Board of Regents should divest their $1.6 billion in companies doing business in the Soviet Union, members of the Save The Oppressed People committee told approximately 20 people-mostly media members and campus officials—during a forum/press conference held on Mrak Hall's south steps.

A systemwide spokesperson in Berkeley said she was unaware of the group's goals and had no comment at that time.

"The civil-rights violations of the South African government pale in comparison to the consistent, systematic and much more heinous and atrocious violations by the Soviet Union," STOP state chairman John Scanlon said.

The Soviet Union has "imperialistically enslaved 22 nations, massacred over 70 million people, imprisoned and tortured political dissidents in slave-labor camps, shot down civilian aircraft and exported terror and persecution across the globe," a STOP resolution states.

The resolution calls for the regents "and all institutions with a moral conscience, to immediately divest from all multinational companies that profit from trade with totalitarian regimes."

UC owns stock in several companies, including Hewlett-Packard, General Electric, Dupont and Union Carbide, which aid and trade with the Soviet Union, Scanlon said.

"Each dollar represents an investment in and a tacit endorsement of callous communist contempt for human rights," he said.

Scanlon said he would return his $200 UC Davis financial-aid check because "I cannot in good faith accept this money while it is tainted by the suffering of half the world.

"I would rather work a few extra hours in freedom than know my education was being paid for by those who profit from tyranny,' he said.

Scanlon said that although current anti-apartheid efforts are commendable, because "apartheid is an evil system which must be abolished," STOP members believe "these efforts have been largely misdirected.

'In every area which the South Africans are accused of abrogating human rights," he said, "the Soviet Union has perpetrated vastly more awful crimes against humanity."

Jerry Drawhorn, one of the antiapartheid protesters staging a sit-in on the Mrak Hall south steps, said current protests are important because "we are on the eve of making changes in South Africa."

Because "Reagan has caved in to business interests in the Soviet Union," Drawhorn said, "we're not on the eve of anything."

Because of the disparity, Tutu said, most blacks must work on white lands and are not allowed to bring their families with them.

"All we want is to be able to come home like other fathers and embrace our wives and children," Tutu said. "We would like to be able to sleep with our wives."

Women and children live in settlement camps while the men work. Fathers are allowed to see their families only 72 hours a year.

The church has wed these people as man and wife and they should be able to live that way, he said.

By protesting and getting involved in the apartheid issue, students have given a new sense of meaning to what it means to belong to the human family, he said. "We are not made for being involved in a rat race. God created us to be human together."

Students, by protesting apartheid, are saying all people belong ings and nature, he said. Ecological problems result from forgetting about the law of interdependencies.

"You are saying no, we can't have our world leaders spend money on instruments of death and destruction when a fraction of the amount spent on these weapons could feed, clothe and educate all of the world's children," he said.

"You are going to change the God will look on this and smile and say, "Don't you think it was worth it to have brought all this into being?" Tutu said. "The kingdoms of this world will become the Kingdom of Christ, and He shall reign for ever and ever and ever. Amen.'

Well it's official now. The Ags can put away the pine tar and stow their gear for another season as they learned Sunday morning that they were denied a berth in the National Collegiate Athletic Association West Regional tournament for a second year in a row.

On The Ball Wayne Watkin

Entries for this spring's intramural golf tournament are due tomorrow, May 15. The tournament has a doubles scramble format. After each shot is hit the team selects the ball that is in the best position and both partners hit their next shot from that spot.

The Davis Municipal Golf Course will host the 18hole tournament. One new golf ball per team is required with the entry form; the balls will be returned to the winners of the tournament. There will be two divisions: one for golfers with a combined handicap of less than 25, and one for teams with higher handicaps. A $7 green fee per person is payable at the pro shop before tee-off. In Ultimate Frisbee play last week, Floppy Discs edged Eat Me 8-7; Gumby's Revenge turned a 6-3 deficit into a 7-6 overtime win over Phi Psi Wanderers; and Barry's Kids topped Juliet & Romeos 9-6.

In B league softball of the fast pitch variety Thursday, Bryan Clarkson scored both Beer Slob runs, including the game-winner in the last inning to deal Club Web a tough 2-1 loss; Smell The Glove's Wayne Watkin threw a two-hit shutout at Schleprocks for a 6-0 win.

Slow pitch B league saw the C Street Tigers stop Boned Stiff 17-16; Tom Clough Memorial battered Intermediate Vector Bogons 12-8.

C league action late last week witnessed Last Chance I beat of In Dilman's Grove 10-8; Coco Puffs squeak past We Forgot Our Name .7-6; I'll Do It crush Joel Kiff 11-2; and A Bunch Of Errors clip ASU 9-8.

In mixed-sex play Thursday, Forceable Rear Entry sodomized Joe's Special 8-5; Sammies Plus gunned down Vet Med Red Tags 13-12; The Barking Spiders defeated Designing For Dollars 9-7; Out For A Tan outshined Club Condor 12-9; and Who Needs A Name beat In Friday's coed games, Innate Releasing Mechanism scored three runs in the final inning to down Vegematics 11-10; Depressed did likewise to beat the Almond Maulers 6-5; Do We Have to Let the Guys Hit smothered Coed Psychos 7-4; and Med School Maulers countered a four-run sixth inning by Kiwis with four of their own to squeeze out an 8-7 victory.

FINAL JUDGEMENT

Felicia Freshman was enrolled in her first upper division English class. Afraid that she couldn't compete with the more experienced students, Felicia enhanced her own paper by copying phrases and ideas from published critical essays, Felicia was caught.

What sanction is appropriate? Felicia should receive an "F" on the paper and be placed on disciplinary probation for at least one year. Felicia should receive a grade based on those portions of her paper that were her own work Felicia should be suspended from the university for one quarter.

Felicia violated the Code of Academic Conduct by submitting someone else's work as her own. UCD Academic Senate Regulation 550 required a "O" or an "F" in such circumstances. Therefore, the best answer is "a". For more on plagiarism and how to avoid it, see tomorrow's Aggie.

nel discusses apartheid in Freebor

senior staff writer

Student action against apartheid and in support of Bishop Desmond Tutu's visit made a powerful statement about student movements and decision-making, Yolo County Supervisor Bob Black said.

'There's no question that what happened today was a very powerful event on the UC campus," said Black, a former ASUCD president and one of 11 speakers at an antiapartheid forum in Freeborn Hall

Black said he disagrees with only one thing: the T-shirts saying "Witness History Being Made."

here is to make history, not witness

"This movement on campus is really refreshing and welcoming to me," AS President Jack Bair said. "(It's) not exactly like the one 10 to 15 years ago because we don't have our friends coming home in black boxes, but it's important nonetheless."

Assemblymember Maxine Waters, D-Los Angeles, was scheduled to speak but broke the engagement because a student told her if she spoke on the steps of Mrak Hall she did not need to speak at Freeborn Hall, Bair said.

fessor Ruth Rosen, a member of UC Davis Faculty for Full Divestment, said she plans to present a petition of over 1,000 faculty and staff signatures to the UC Board of Regents meeting in Berkeley Thursday.

Faculty committee members do not want their retirement funds used to uphold apartheid and feel it is their moral obligation to set high standards and values for students,

"There comes a time where investing in certain kinds of human conduct is intolerable," Rosen said, quoting from a statement regents.

The regents can find alternative companies which can produce profitable investments, said Rosen, one of 38 UC faculty members arrested in Berkeley at an apartheid

UC graduate student George Kagonyera from Uganda spoke on behalf of African students at UC

"We are deeply honored that one of us was able to stand before you," he said. "We would like to express our uttermost thanks to the students and all involved who made it possible for Bishop Desmond

African students at UCD had made a deliberate attempt not to get involved in the issue of apartheid and divestment because they considered it a "domestic issue," he said.

Kagonyera said he has been less than impressed so far by what the United States has done to combat apartheid and supports the student movement on university campuses.

"I humbly stand here in the name of the African students on this campus and (hope) this lonely voice in the wilderness is listened

A new "international community of consciousness" is evident on the UCD campus, said the Rev. Judy O'Neill of the Cal Aggie to write."

"Something is happening here and we invite you to catch the spirit, to own the community of consciousness that has come to Mrak Hall-now Bishop Desmond Tutu Hall—and to come join us,"

Kurt Knudsen, associate director of the UC Student Lobby in Sacramento, urged students and community members to take the time this week to write to legislators about apartheid.

"One letter may just seem like a piece of paper with your opinion on it," he said. "They (legislators) know that one letter represents statistically the views of 750 people in their district that didn't bother

Assemblymember Maxine Waters, D-Los Angeles, who is carrying the first divestment bill ever to win committee approval, said she "certainly hopes" Tutu's remarks would win over divestment

"Once people experience Bishop Tutu, it helps bring the issues to life," Waters said. "I believe it's hard to ignore this experience."

Assemblymember Tom Hayden, D-Santa Monica, also said he expects Tutu's words to help him win passage of a resolution calling on UC to directly aid anti-apartheid

Hayden's resolution, which will be considered in a subcommittee on post-secondary education today, suggests that UC law professors provide legal aid to South African political prisoners, that UC provide scholarships to students prevented from attending South African universities, that UC recruit guest speakers who have denounced apartheid in South Africa and that the UC Institute of Industrial Relations work to shore up black trade unions in South Africa.

Tutu's appearance could also have ramifications for UC President Gardner, who is scheduled to testify on UC's plans for divestment before an Assembly subcommittee today. "I think he has a tough act to follow, no doubt about it," said Assemblymember Sam Farr, D-

Monterey. Gardner has repeatedly refused to state his position on divestment, noting he could unduly influence the scheduled June vote on the issue if he were to publicly support or oppose divestment.

"I think that he has some answers to give. I think he has some sort of mandate to give us an answer," said Assemblymember Gwen Moore, D-Los Angeles. "I think he will continue to do that (refuse specific remarks), but he'll have to give us some kind of

Hayden said the timing of the two speakers will make Gardner's testimony "interesting."

Tutu's swing through the capital netted his South African Council of Churches more than $10,000. Some 650 civic and religious leaders each paid $15 to attend the Interfaith Service Bureau's breakfast, where a Procter & Gamble Co. representative presented Tutu with the $10,000 check.

Tutu told his early-morning audience that anti-apartheid activists here should not feel sorry for black South Africans.

'Sometimes when you get clobbered, as we do at home, you feel sorry for yourself. You feel so low, as one says, that you can crawl under a snake," he said. "It's nice to be felt sorry for...but actually you want to envy us. For it is infinitely easier to be a Christian in South Africa than it is here.

"For us, the issues are so much more straightforward. Either you are for apartheid or you are against apartheid," he said.

After the breakfast, Tutu held another breakfast meeting with legislators, including Assembly Speaker Willie Brown, D-San Francisco.

Tutu did not meet with Gov. George Deukmejian, who said last week he had no plans to see the Nobel laureate.

"Monte deserved that first place—he had been working hard all year," Coach Vochatzer said. In an unimpressive pole vault, Andrew Avellar leaped a mere 15'3" to take first place. Avellar said he usually starts at that height. "Turlock is a terrible place to jump. There was a stiff headwind that made it impossible," Avellar

Next week, seven Aggies will travel to Cal State, Los Angeles to compete in the Division II national finals. The list includes longjumper Fernandez, pole-vaulter Avellar, steeplechaser Steinmaus, distance-runner Stephanisko, 1,500-meter runner Gerhart, and intermediate hurdlers Frederickson and Devine.

Vochatzer is confident. "Every one of them should qualify for the finals. They've trained hard and
